In his summary of the process and timelines, Doug noted that the results of today’s meeting would constitute the Senate’s initial recommendations to UP&BAC; the Senate and all other University constituents would have another opportunity for comment and recommendations in a few weeks after UP&BAC developed its recommendations based on the recommendations it receives from all of the Senates.
Mick asked Claire Waldron, a member of the Faculty Senate task group that compiled suggestions from senators and other faculty regarding changes to the Strategic Plan, to provide a summary of that process and an explanation of the document that the group developed, which was distributed to all senators with today’s agenda.

Mick then recommended that the Senate proceed by recommending motions that could be revised and then voted on, noting that the compilation of those motions approved at today’s Senate meeting would constitute the Senate’s initial recommendations to the UP&BAC.

Marty Aylesworth, secretary of the Senate, noted that because the Senate rules on motions were suspended and printed copies of motions were not available to the secretary, he would record in the minutes only the final form of motions as submitted for a vote.

III. Reports
A. Vice President for Academic Affairs Report

Dr. Self’s report of information to the Senate for this meeting was distributed to senators prior to the meeting (see VPAA Report).

In addition, he provided an update on the budget for next year, noting the following points:

- the vice presidents have agreed on creating a contingency fund of approximately $250,000 to be held in reserve until January
- the vice presidents have agreed to offload approximately $500,000 in Student Affairs from E&G to Auxiliary
- after these adjustments, the University will have a net reduction of approximately $1,200,000 in its E&G budget for next year compared with its budget for this year
- under the most recent model being considered by the vice presidents, Academic Affairs will absorb approximately $500,000 (41%) of the reduction and Business Affairs will absorb approximately $475,000 (40%), with the remainder to be absorbed by the other divisions and the President’s Office
- Academic Affairs is close to meeting its share of the reduction under the current model (within approximately $200,000) using a combination of strategies including reductions in staff to centers, returning faculty from administrative positions to teaching positions, reductions to student support programs, and offloading some student support expenses to Auxiliary by using the student matriculation fees
Dr. Self also noted:
• we have filled approximately 30 of 47 advertised faculty positions; the remaining 17 position searches have been frozen to provide funds for needed adjunct faculty and the Deans are prioritizing the needs for the unfilled full-time positions
• the Academic Affairs non-personnel budget total has not been cut, but the non-personnel budgets will be distributed using a different model to make these budgets allocations more rational
• faculty professional travel dollars will not be cut
• he currently believes we will be able to fund faculty professional development leaves which were conditionally approved by the Board subject to available funds
• by using Schedule M, departments will be able to control faculty assignments and reassigned time; however, as a University we need to reach a point where we are at or above Schedule M expectations in order to make a stronger case in Richmond for the need for additional faculty positions
• there will be some cross-divisional reorganization to reduce the number of administrators, primarily involving Academic Affairs, Business Affairs, and Student Affairs
• he has proposed a phased reduction in E&G funds for the Business Assistance Center over the next 3 years to bring its funding back to the actual allocation from the legislature
• there will be a moratorium on implementing new programs; while the University needs to continue to examine the potential need for new programs – particularly in fields that are changing in the workforce – the implementation of any such changes will be dependent on the availability of resources either from an infusion of additional funds or from reallocations that result from established procedures such as those inherent in Program Review
