Technology/Research Fund	$25 million to support research and commercialization of technology. The VRTIF will create a comprehensive structure to grow Virginia's innovation economy. The VRTIF will serve as a catalyst for leveraging the entrepreneur, Virginia higher education research assets and private-sector funding to encourage evolving technologies that create the industries, businesses and jobs of the future. Target sectors include information technology, biotechnology, life sciences, alternative energy, advanced electronics, polymers, composites and aerospace propulsion, among others. The VRTIF would be governed by a board to include technology industry experts, legislators and administration representatives with funding broken down into three areas: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Commercialization Fund – provide grants to grow new small businesses and existing businesses to accelerate entrance of new products and services to the market • Research Matching Fund - provide matching funds to incentivize collaboration between institutions of higher education and companies engaged in research in high-growth, emerging industries. • Eminent Scholars Fund - provide funding for bringing the best and brightest researchers, scholars and professors in key technologies to Virginia universities.
Refundable Research and Development Tax Credit – $5 million	JLARC recently reported that an area where Virginia can be more competitive is by implementing a Research and Development incentive – as Virginia is only one of twelve states that do not have an R&D tax credit. This amendment will create the Refundable Research and Development Tax Credit for startups and early stage firms in targeted industries. A base incentive would be provided for qualifying companies and an additional incentive would be provided to companies accessing research and development services through Virginia's colleges and universities.
